Course Overview

This workshop is designed to review the informations on the diagnosis and management of gastric cancer. The symposium provides an ideal mix of the traditional standard of care principles with cutting edge, forward-moving practices. It explores issues related to surgical technique, adjuvant and neo-adjuvant approach. The workshop runs theory along with live transmissions from the operating room of the Emergency Clinical Hospital Bucharest - Floreasca. Professor KATAI will have some very interesting presentations along with very experienced romanian faculty. The material presented will be exciting as well as readily assimilated and applied. Professor MARUYAMA will be chairman of the workshop.

To whom the course addresses:

This program is designed to meet the continuing education needs of general surgery residents as well as general surgery consultants. It is also useful for researchers in general surgery and physicians during PhD studies in general surgery and human anatomy.

The following goals will be pursued:

- To make the gastric lymphadenectomy concept known and demonstrated to young surgeons
- To demonstrate the current concept on gastric anatomy
- To take advantage of Japanese experience in gastric cancer surgery
- To spread current standards in diagnosis and therapy for gastric cancer
- To provide surgeons with the information and skills needed for successful treatment of gastric cancer.
- To confront surgeons with different controversial scenarios
- To provide concrete answers and guidelines for gastric cancer
- Develop skills to manage complicated issues
